SAD APPAIR IN HANCOCK COUNTY .-- A correspondent writing from Hancock county informs us of a sad and fatal affair that occurred at Mount Blanchard, in that county, on Tuesday evening last, between two physicians-Drs. Mansfield and Haggarty-These gentlemen had been associated in the with new discoveries, inventions, and whatpractice of their profession, but the parinership had been recently dissolved. Meeting in a store on Tuesday evening, a controversy sprang up between them, in which Mansfield charged Haggarty with having injured, or sought to injure, him while in business. Haggarty thereupon struck him, and retired to a seat. Mansfield did not offer resistance, but repeated the accusation, when Haggarty again struck him, this time in the temple, the blow being so severe as to cause the death of Manafield on the following

There is quite a number from the township of Euclid and vicinity, who have thus nobly volunteered their services, and if need be, their lives, in this holy cause of redeeming our nation from an unhallowed rebellion. But one of them has suddenly fallen .-Thomas Corwin Dille, in the bloom of his to be sold to pay charges. A chance for youth, has been a natched from earth, and we shall see his face no more. His disease was fever; and after lingering in a hospital awhile, the fell destroyer came to still the heart, and to close the bright eye forever, to all earthly scenes. How crushingly did the tidings of death fall on his aged parents' cars; and the whole family will mourn, long and deeply, over the lost one, cut down in the vigor and strength of his early life.

Long before his sickness he wished to meet the enemy in battle array, but never had the opportunity; yet he died no less the rears of age, and the youngest of the fami-y. He left his home, where the bright sunight and the joyous song of birds were heard by grove and stream, and the blue waves of Erie were dancing in melody and music.—
It was blissful and inspiring for the young heart to go on the mission of good and glory to the nation; but he thought not that the winding sheet would be encircled about him, when he next should be at his father's dwelling. No finger pointed to the sad and, san and stranger, and no clouds dimmed his bright horizon. Ahi but now the reed is broken! The flowers are withered, and cast upon the same alter that contained the most holy hings of our nation's dignity and honor. Many have been thus nobly given, and the bright hopes that cluster about them, for-ever dashed to the ground. But it is the noblest place to die. As the oil of the lamp of life is going out, the dying soldier's thoughts can tower above all around, and rest with the sublime consciousness of dy-ng in a glorious cause. Evening Herald please copy. S. P. M. Euclid, January 6, 1862.

From the 23d Regiment. CAMP Molleate, NEAR PAYETTEVILLE, January 1st, 1862. EDITORS LEADER: - A happy new year to you! This has been a "gala day" with Co. "A" of the "bloodless" 231. Although we are located in a country damned by "belligerants," yet that did not hinder us from enjoying ourselves hugely to-day. Our Company has had the good luck to be stationed on an outpost some two miles from Fayetteville, with the duty of keeping up a "picket post," and also to keep the roads in repair, and in that we perhaps have the advantage we can have the first pick out of the good | Hall's Homeopathic Pharmsey, 17 Public things which we may find attached to the farm-houses in the country. The whole Company has done honor to a New Year's dinner to-day, which would throw many of the nice dinners of Ohio in the shade. It was prepared entirely by privates E. B.
